Title: Leadership opportunities for delivering patient-centred care

Speaker: Dr. Michelle Cleary

Abstract

Nurses are well positioned to be key agents in leading and advancing global health care. The size of the discipline, the trust that the public places in nurses, and the collaborative relationships that nurses foster, provide countless opportunities for improving the healthcare experience for patients. The focus of this presentation will be to discuss opportunities for nurses to 'make a difference' and the broader impact this may have on healthcare generally. Inclusive practices that build leadership capabilities that can facilitate change on a national level and globally to ultimately achieve better patient outcomes for all will be presented by sharing examples from a current program of research.
